

ABSTRACT

A system is disclosed for translating access requests between a format suitable for a relational database and a different format used by an application. When the system
5 receives a data access request from the application, the system accesses a mapping catalog and translates the request based on the mapping catalog. The translated request is then provided to the relational database.